INTERESTING RELICS DUG UP BY ARCHAEOLOGIST PEPPER.

Eight skeletons and many rare finds unearthed near Totenville—Remains of Indians who lived on the island before the white man's advent. Archaeologist George H. Pepper of the Natural Science Association of New York, who for several weeks past has been searching for Indian relics at Bentley Manor, near Totenville, Staten Island, has recently made some highly interesting discoveries. Since July 27, when the first skeletons were unearthed, some of them in a remarkable state of preservation.

The most interesting "find" was made last Thursday, when three skeletons, one of them of unusual size, were found in almost perfect condition within a few feet of each other and less than two feet below the surface of the ground. Their position clearly indicated that the Indians had been killed in battle and buried hastily. This fact was established from their nearness to the surface, and from the absence of ornaments, implements, or pottery, which the Indians usually carried with them.

The place where Mr. Pepper is pursuing his research is in the extreme southwestern part of Staten Island, about a mile from Totenville station, and but a short distance below the historic old Billow house, which was built 200 years ago, and is one of the oldest houses in the State. Rural Ridge, where the trenches are being dug, has a southwestern exposure on an elevated position overlooking the bay.

The ridge is near the old Joel Cole house, built in 1838. In digging the trench for this house portions of several skeletons were found, and later, in 1863, when an addition was built, ten or twelve skeletons were unearthed at a depth of from three to four feet below the surface. The bones were in a state of perfect preservation, but little attention was paid to them at the time.

When the Sixty arrived at Rural Ridge yesterday Mr. Pepper and his assistants began an investigation. Last May he had been interested in the bones of the Indians, and he had been searching for them ever since. He had been searching for them ever since.

MINNETTA WATER STOPS WORK.

A Calson Will Be Used at the Site of the Cooper & Co. Building.

Not attempt was made yesterday to sink the corner pier foundation shaft at Sixth avenue and Nineteenth street, where the new building for the Cooper & Co. department store is being erected. The work was stopped by the failure of water from one of the ground struts which were used to support the shaft. It is believed that the present method of sinking the shaft will be abandoned. In sinking the other shafts the water was kept out by means of sheet piling, which has been used in the past.

ABOUT A TON OF GREEN TURTLES.

Seventeen, Mostly Bins, Arrive on the Vigilant—Atonement for the Way.

Allegation of turtles arrived here yesterday by the Ward line steamer Vigilant. They were consigned to a fish dealer in Fulton Market, who deals largely in this commodity, supplying many private families and a few restaurants. The turtles were of the large green variety, and they travelled as deck passengers, resting quietly on their backs the entire voyage.

Originally these turtles inhabited the sea waters about Mexico. Being of the sex which lays eggs they came up on the sand beach to do this. They were taken by a fisherman, who turned them over on their backs, pierced their left fore flippers, and fastened them with a rope run through the flippers to stakes driven in the sand. In due time the turtles were loaded on wagons and carried to the Vigilant.

One of the men on the Vigilant told the Tribune that he had seen a turtle which weighed 1,500 pounds. In weight they varied from 500 to 2,000 pounds. In winter the turtles lay on their backs for several months, and in summer they lay on their sides. They are very hardy animals, and they can live for many years.

THREE CATS AND A DOG.

An Upstairs Litigation in the County Court House Settled by Habeas Corpus.

One litigation matter was settled summarily at the County Court House yesterday. The new Janitor, Patrick Keane, and a present resident of a fine St. Bernard pug, which he kept in the upper floor reserved for the janitor's quarters. Its growth was astonishing, especially in the feet. It used to strut through the upper corridor, looking down through the gratings into the lower floor with the confidence that is born of huge dimensions.

To suppress the mice three cats have been kept in the janitor's quarters. They are well-bred cats, which never got down stairs in court hours. When the night of vigil was over they were taken to the upper floor, where the grating door was shut on them until the next night.
